NON-SURGICAL LIPOSUCTION TREATMENT

Gymophobics™ THE 30 MINUTE WORKOUT

Non-Surgical Liposuction is the latest and greatest in fat reduction, it is quick, painless and really works!

Non-Surgical Liposuction uses ultrasound emissions technology which produces CAVITATION causing the removal of fat cells. In short this breaks up fat deposits reducing cellulite and body fat. Non-Surgical Liposuction fights cellulite painlessly and non-invasively!

EACH TREATMENT IS 30 MINS

We recommend a course of 2 treatments per week over 6-8 weeks

The reason for the growing popularity of non-invasive ultra sound treatment is its ability to offer fat loss (and therefore inch loss) without the need for surgery and all the risks of infection and other side effects that surgical lipo suction involves.

The Non Invasive Ultra Sound Lipo treatment is simple and rewarding, ultra sound waves are directed to your certain target areas to produce an effect called Cavitation. Cavitation impacts on the fat cells causing them to be destroyed.

There is no pain involved either during the treatment or as an after effect.

When the fat cells are destroyed their contents are released into the circulatory system as glycerol (sugar) and free fatty acids.

Glycerol is used up as an energy source so we advise exercise after a treatment to give you optimum results. We give you FREE vibroplate sessions following each treatment.

The free fatty acids are broken down by the liver in the normal way and are ejected from the body in your urine.

We treat no more than two areas at any one time using ultra sound as it is important not to release too much fat into the circulatory system at any one time.

With the fat cells being destroyed it is much harder to regain the fat you have lost but inevitably if you eat a poor diet, over eat, and do not exercise, the weight will eventually return.

A delay of at least 72 hours must elapse between each treatment session to allow the fat released into the system to be dispersed safely. We recommend two treatment sessions per week.

We recommend that you drink plenty of water to help eliminate the fat which has been processed by the liver. You should reduce your intake of carbohydrates, fats and alcohol.

THERE ARE A NUMBER OF ADDITIONAL OPTIONS WHICH CAN SUPPLEMENT YOUR TREATMENT!

Cellulite Gel
Used twice a day and prior to your ultra sound treatment, which will help greatly reduce the appearance of cellulite deposits.

Toning Gel
Should be applied before each ultra sound treatment to aid the skin firming process.

Vibration Sessions
Following each treatment the vibration plate will aid the dispersion of fat through the body. These are given FREE after each treatment.

Body Wraps
Are the most effective treatment for eliminating lymph and toxins. Following your treatment a body wrap is the perfect way to complete a session. You'll leave feeling relaxed, refreshed, and inches lighter.

Massage
Promotes the flow of lymph and toxins towards the lymph nodes for dispersal.

Slimming Classes
Are a fantastic way to get support and advise on your road to success!

QUEST FOR WAR TALES

LOCAL people will be able to share their own family's First World War history when a Europe-wide project visits Banbury next week.

By Oliver Evans

The town will hold one of only two UK roadshows, part of a major project to create an online archive of Europe's war memorabilia and memories.

Visitors to the Banbury Museum-hosted event on Saturday, November 3, will have their objects photographed or scanned and get to tell their family's Great War stories. Content can also be uploaded from home.

Tudor Hall School pupil Chloe Coules, 14, has been inspired by two medals belonging to her great-great-grandfather William John Mills and a cap badge from great-great-grandfather Lawrence Hyde.

She found out that Mr Mills was in the Royal Engineers, while 15-year-old Mr Hyde inflated his age by two years to join the "death or glory boys" of the 17th Lancers. Both survived the war.

She said: "I want to try to find out as much as possible. Otherwise it just turns into facts about the people – it is not personal."

Kevin Northover, 53, wrote Banbury during the Great War, revealing the town's role in the conflict, but has unanswered questions about his own family's story.

Aged 12, he was shown a photograph captioned "Uncle Will" taken in 1883 in the still-trading Banbury photographers Blinkhorns.

Further research found details about his great-uncle, William Henry Goldsmith, and that the family story about two of his fingers being bitten off by a horse was not true – they had been shot off in battle in 1917.

Yet he is still looking to confirm the identify of a downed German plane, which his uncle took a piece of fabric from to write a note home, telling relatives he was "quite well".

He believes the crew are buried in the same cemetery as another great-uncle. He said: "If this proves to be correct, it would be a remarkable coincidence for our family.

"There have been a lot of myths about the First World War and people need to know what it was truly like."

A photograph of grandfather Harry Brain led "dumbfounded" Keith Brain to discover the soldier had three brothers in the conflict, Albert and George – both killed in action – and William.

The 70-year-old – who is trying to find photographs of William and Albert – said: "It is hard to imagine how their mother felt when the news came to her.

"Digitising and uploading the artefacts and documents about the men who served will ensure that their experiences and sacrifice will never be forgotten."

The Europeana project's backers include the European Union, Oxford University, The British Library and the Soldiers of Oxfordshire Museum.

Museum historian Stephen Barker said: "Soldiers have passed away and it is important that we don't lose touch with those feelings, ideas and beliefs that people had."

Next week's event will run from 10am to 4.30pm. To see the archive and upload items, visit europeana1914-1918.eu

Mayor tells of Pied Piper role

BANBURY mayor Tony Ilott felt like the Pied Piper as children followed him to get free rides at the town's annual Michaelmas Fair.

Rides occupied Market Place and Horsefair and, in a long-standing tradition, the town mayor carried a 14cm brass key.

By Andrew Ffrench

When he touched each ride with the key, children were allowed a free go.

Mr Ilott, 61, said: "The fair must be about 400 years old. The people of Banbury look forward to it all year.

"When the children see me with my key, they follow me around so they can get a free ride. I'm a bit like the Pied Piper in the fairy tale.

"It's called the Golden Key, but it's really made of brass. As far as I know, this tradition doesn't happen anywhere else.

"There were lots of scary rides but after I opened the fair I just had to have a go on the dodgems.

"This was one of Banbury's biggest events of the year. Thousands of people came along."

The fair opened last Wednesday and ran until Saturday.

Entertainment ranges from 'Corrie' stars to competition winners

FLASHBACK to last year when the crowds packed the town centre for the Christmas light switch-on

Stars line up for big seasonal switch-on

THE stars of this year's Banbury Christmas lights switch-on are promising a fun-filled day of laughter and top tunes.

The event, on Sunday, November 25, will see five performers take to the stage outside the Town Hall in Bridge Street.

Then Coronation Street actors Jack P. Shepherd and Ryan Thomas will throw the switch to get the festive season under way.

The show will be hosted by Banbury Sound breakfast presenter Kirsty Leahy and Radio Horton's Stewart Green.

First on, at 2.10pm, will be Brackley's Jenna Hone, who won Banbury Sound's Search for a Christmas Star contest to sing at the event.

The 25-year-old said: "I love singing and I want to be heard by everyone, but getting a break into showbusiness is so difficult."

By Oliver Evans

She sang to Tom Jones, Jessie J, and Will.i.am after getting into the last 110 for BBC TV's The Voice last year and was chosen for the lights switch-on from auditions at Banbury Town Hall this month.

Banbury Rock Choir – which performed at last year's event – will belt out pop and soul classics at 2.35pm and local indie pop four-piece Dance a la Plage will then take to the stage at 2.55pm.

Manager Sam Jackson said: "It is going to be great to have a local up-and-coming band in the line-up."

Rock covers band Transmission – whose repertoire includes classics by The Police, U2 and The Killers – will play at 3.45pm.

Vocalist Matty Keefe said: "I was lucky enough to do a Christmas switch-on with another band last year. I had a fantastic time. I am really looking forward to this year."

Robbie Williams impersonator Paul Reason will bring the musical entertainment to a close at 4.30pm with highlights from the Take That star's 15-year solo career.

He said: "There will be plenty of Robbiness, fun and a few laughs."

The TV actors – who play David Platt and Jason Grimshaw – will greet revellers from the stage at 5.15pm for a 5.30pm switch-on.

Mr Thomas said: "Of course Jack and I have worked together in Corrie for years, but our characters rarely appear on screen together.

"Off screen we are really good mates, so we are looking forward to this personal appearance and switching on the festive lights in Banbury. See you there Corrie fans!"

The event is being organised by Banbury Town Council. Town mayor Tony Ilot said: "I always look forward to the Christmas lights switch-on, it is one of our best events.

"It is good to get a TV celeb, it brings the crowds out. It is a free event, it is good for shopkeepers and good for the public."

£17m flood guard launched

The £17m Banbury flood alleviation scheme has been officially launched.

The scheme reduces the flood risk to more than 500 properties in the Banbury area, including the railway station and football club.

Ian Tomes, the Environment Agency's flood and coastal risk manager, said: "Reducing the risk to 441 residential and 73 businesses will make a huge difference to those who were affected during the 1998 and more recently, the 2007 floods."

Man denies axe attack charge

A MAN, who appeared in court on Monday, denied striking another man in the face with an axe.

Barrie Potts pleaded not guilty to the late-night attack on 44-year-old Paul Williams. Mr Williams was rushed to hospital after he was allegedly hit in the head with the axe. He suffered facial injuries in the attack on August 2.

Appearing at Oxford Crown Court for a plea and case management hearing, 27-year-old Potts denied GBH, following the incident in Gattridge Street, Banbury.

Potts, of Marlborough Road, Banbury, was told that he must return to court on December 2 for a trial. He was remanded in custody.

Cloudy2Clear Windows – Service With A Smile!

It's been a crazy few months for Cloudy2Clear Windows. The company which specialises in repairing windows which are steamed up, broken or damaged by replacing the panes – not the frames has grown rapidly as homeowners take advantage of their services.

Managing Director Trevor Skidmore feels that it's all about service. 'Our product is simple. If your double glazing is misted up we can replace the glass at a fraction of the cost of a new window, in any type of frame, and with a new 5 year guarantee. But it's not just about saving people money, although that obviously helps. Many tradespeople have struggled since last year and I honestly feel that during the good times a minority perhaps didn't focus on customer care as much as they should have done. We make sure we turn up when we say we will, do the job the customer requires and leave their house as clean as a whistle. I often get comments back from customers on how they really didn't expect that sort of service which, in a way, is very sad for the service industry as a whole.'

Cloudy2Clear service the Oxford, Banbury & Abingdon areas and Trevor is finding that his approach is a major factor in his success. 'The truth is that it's not just the personal satisfaction that I get from doing a good job but also it makes good business sense. I get a huge amount of business from friends and family of people I've done work for, which just goes to show how much a little bit of effort is appreciated.'

So, if your windows are steamed up, broken or damaged give Trevor a call for a free quotation on 0800 61 21 118 and he'll be happy to help!

Anger as move comes after NHS chiefs awarded a pay rise

Scrooge jibe as trust axes Christmas

A HEALTH trust – which awarded its chief executive a pay rise while other staff salaries were frozen – has axed Christmas parties for hundreds of its nurses.

Around 717 staff working at community hospitals across Oxfordshire had been offered a donation of up to £35 each towards a Christmas party as a thank you.

But this year the payment has been axed for the first time.

The decision comes after it was revealed that Julie Waldron, the former chief executive of the trust who was responsible for overseeing the cuts and was in charge when the decision was made to cut the Christmas payments, saw her salary band increased from £160,000-£165,000 to £165,000- £170,000.

She was this month replaced by Stuart Bell.

Community Health Oxfordshire, which runs community hospitals and outreach services, and the Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire Mental Health Trust merged last year.

The new joint trust is called the Oxford Health NHS Foundation Trust.

By Amanda Williams

It has outlined £52m of cuts over the next five years from all of its services – including staffing costs – and workers are on an NHS-wide pay freeze.

It is also currently consulting with nurses on bringing in a new longer shift of 12 hours to "increase efficiency".

A spokesman for the new organisation said the decision to scrap the Christmas party payments was approved by their charitable funds committee in April and would come into force this Christmas.

She said: "When Oxford Health NHS FT and Community Health Oxfordshire integrated, work took place to ensure policies and guidelines were rationalised to ensure a consistent approach to charitable funds spending across the Trust.

"In order for donated funds to retain their charitable status, any expenditure must, whether directly or indirectly, provide patient benefit.

"The Charitable Funds Committee considers that expenditure on staff Christmas parties or other staff social events or entertaining does not normally provide sufficient patient benefit and is not the most efficient or effective way of applying available funds in order to provide patient benefit.

"Given the limited funds available to Oxford Health Charitable Funds the decision has been taken that no expenditure of this kind may be funded."

Previously, staff at the OBMH had received a token gift, such as a box of chocolates, for Christmas – but a decision on whether this will continue has not yet been taken.

The Royal College of Nursing said it was a "kick in the teeth" for nursing staff.

Patricia Marquis, South East regional director of the RCN said: "This could be the final nail in the coffin. Nurses are telling us how demoralised they are.

"It has been one change after another, one consultation after another. Something as small as losing their Christmas donation for staff functions can have a real knock-on effect to team morale.

"To hear that the frontline workforce are having to make these sacrifices at a time of a national pay freeze and changes to pensions, whilst managers get a payrise, is a real kick in the teeth for nurses. Quite frankly it is a grossly insensitive move by the directors."

Ian Mckendrick, local spokesman for UNISON, said: "To think that such a small token of appreciation at Christmas doesn't get immeasurable rewards for patients, in terms of staff having with a good morale looking after them, shows no understanding of what makes the NHS tick.

"Scrooge could learn a thing or two from these people.

"Perhaps the local NHS bosses could make up the shortfall from their incredible pay rises."

Chief executive of Oxford University Hospitals Trust, Sir Jonathan Michael – who saw his pay bracket go up from £210,000-£215,000 to £215,000-£220,000 last year – refused to discuss the issue.

Former chief executive Julie Waldron, whose salary band increased to £165,000-£170,000

Crime figures show drop

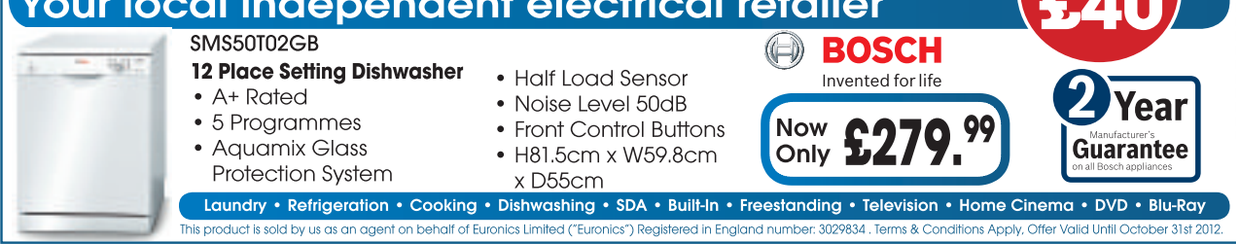

CRIME in the Thames Valley region has fallen by 14 per cent, according to new figures.

There were 143,765 crimes between July 1 last year and June 30 this year, compared to 166,315 in the previous period.

The force recorded the second largest fall in England and Wales, according to the Office for National Statistics.

Chief Constable Sara Thornton said: "This performance is down to the hard work and commitment of officers and staff, as well as the continuing support from our local communities and partners, who have shown a real dedication to helping with the fight against crime."

Timely lead for Chiltern

A YEAR after the punctuality of its trains plummeted, following the launch of the new Mainline timetable, Chiltern Railways turned in the best performance of the county's three train operators last month.

According to Network Rail, from mid-August to mid-September, 95.5 per cent of Chiltern trains reached their destinations on time, compared with 87 per cent in the same period last year.

Sister company CrossCountry Trains also saw an improvement, with 91.3 per cent of trains on time, up from 90 per cent 12 months ago.

First Great Western's punctuality slipped down to 91 per cent from 92.5 per cent last year but was up from the figure achieved from mid-July to mid-August, when just 87.4 per cent of its trains were on time.

Nationally, 94 per cent of trains were on time in the four-week counting period, up from 92.5 per cent last year and from 92 per cent in the previous four weeks this year.

Offences 'so serious' that case is sent to Crown court for sentencing

OAP victims of garden fraudster

A MAN from Bloxham has admitted six further fraud offences over gardening cons that hit county residents as old as 94.

Jason Butcher, 29, of Newlands Farm Caravan Site, Milton Road, will be sentenced next month after admitting 14 offences.

He admits theft after borrowing £700 from Kristeen Goodband, 75, of Banbury, to buy strimmer blades and then not paying her back.

He also admitted fraud by false representation to her on the same day, August 13, 2010, by charging £1,575 to cut a cypress hedge but not carrying out work to the full amount.

On October 12 that year he committed the same offence with George Payne, 84, of Oxford, by charging £120 to cut down a sycamore tree which Butcher falsely said had honey fungus.

He admits the charge over by billing Ruth Purser, 94, of Carterton, a total of £450 to take down a "dangerous" tree on November 29, 2010.

By Oliver Evans

In January 2011, he charged Eileen Mosson, 77, of Wallingford, some £4,400 for work to trees in her garden but did not carry out work to that value.

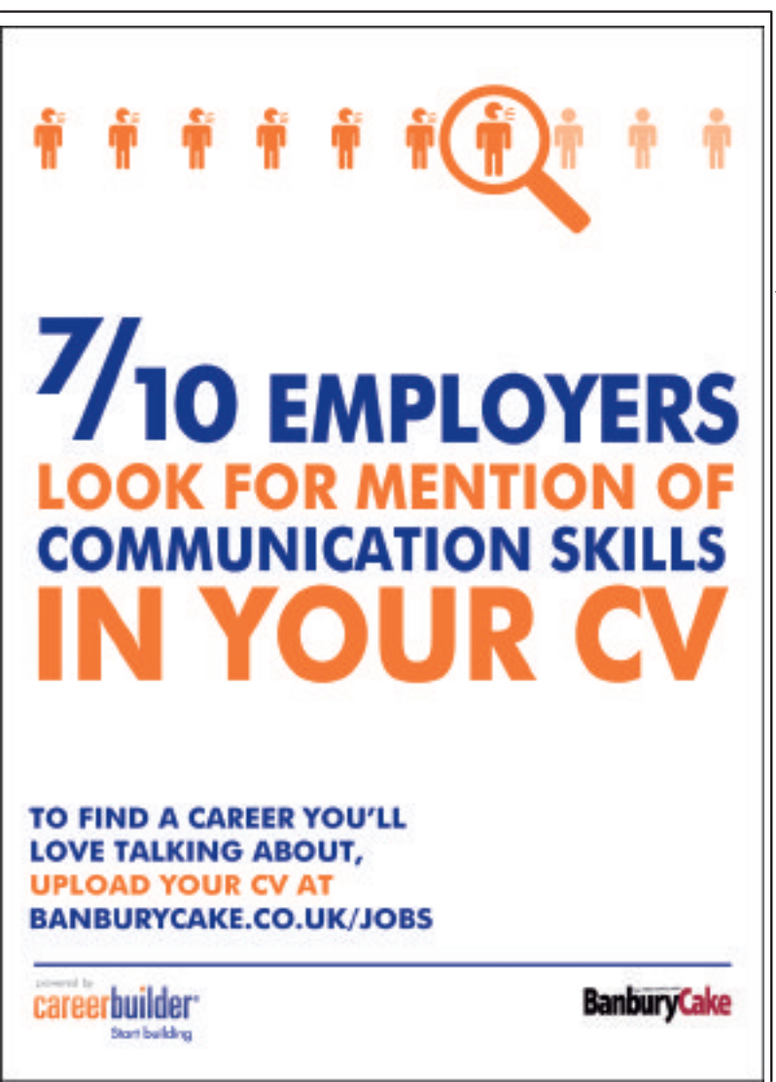

Butcher also admitted breaching consumer protection regulations over work to trees at the Brightwell-cum-Sotwell home of Anne Marie Fisher, 55, in March last year.

He also admitted six offences of transferring criminal property in relation to three of his victims.

Prosecutor Matthew Corrie said at Oxford Magistrates' Court on Friday: "These offences are really confidence fraud."

He said they were so serious that Butcher should be sentenced at Oxford Crown Court, which has more powers.

This was supported by the magistrates and Butcher will be sentenced at the Crown court on November 19.

College launches job-finder service for its students

A JOB-finder service has been launched by college and recruitment bosses in the first scheme of its kind in Oxfordshire.

Oxford & Cherwell Valley College is working with recruitment group REED NCFE Partnership to offer jobs to out-going students.

About 20 jobs are currently available for those set to finish some full-time courses and the college's Get That Job scheme.

This programme offers free courses to the unemployed who get means-tested benefits and are not on the Government's work programme.

It lasts from a day up to four months and helps students in areas like CV writing and interview skills.

Current jobs include bricklaying and business administrators and the partnership will include roles not advertised elsewhere.

College principal Sally Dicketts said: "This new partnership puts employment and employability at the very heart of the college community.

"Further education colleges are no longer just places of learning, but are also focused and effective recruitment centres for local businesses."

The project will operate from the college's Broughton Road, Banbury, and Oxpens Road, Oxford, campuses.

Nick Hughes, senior operations manager at REED NCFE, said: " People want to gain skills and enjoy college; but they also want to forge a career after they finish developing their skills."

The REED NCFE Partnership links educational charity NCFE with recruitment firm REED.

Market to hark back to Victoriana

A VICTORIAN market will be held for the first time in Banbury in a bid to boost Christmas trade.

Cherwell District Council will organise the event with the help of market operator Sketts on Friday, December 7.

Shops are being encouraged to open late, set up stalls and dress in Victorian costumes for the 9.30am to 8pm event.

In a letter to traders, business development manager Karen Matthews said it was "in direct response to suggestions from a number of traders to boost footfall in the town".

It added: "We envisage this taking place on an annual basis."

The authority has come under pressure to help firms weather the recession. The last plea included a petition calling for the first three hours' free parking in council car parks. Instead, the council announced that parking fees would be waived on Saturdays, Sundays and Mondays from December 1 to January 7. But it said it could not afford an all-year-round concession.

Barry Whitehouse, chairman of the Old Town Association of traders, said: "It is going to be absolutely amazing. It is going to be a great event."

Mr Whitehouse, who runs The Artery, in Church Lane, said: "It is really good that the council is taking traders' concerns to heart and looking at practical ways to increase footfall."

Project that targets the 'unsporty'

New charity offers an alternative

BELOW: A young player gets to grips with roller hockey

FOR many young people, traditional sport seems a bit boring or just leaves them cold.

But a new Oxfordshire charity is aiming to put that fun back by bringing skating, roller hockey and other alternative activities into schools and communities.

Sport for Streets manager Dave Edwards said: "The whole ethos of our charity is that a lot of kids are deemed 'not sporty' at school. I know I was.

"But then I started playing roller hockey and, eventually, I played for Great Britain, taught children how to play and it became my whole life.

By Rhianne Pope

"And that's for someone who 'wasn't sporty'. We want to show these kids that they just haven't found the right sport yet."

The charity was set up in January and has since worked with more than 2,000 children across the county.

It currently runs a street hockey project in schools including Chipping Norton School, Longfield School in Bicester, and North Kidlington School.

It was also recently awarded a grant to kickstart growth in street hockey across the region.

Mr Edwards said: "There have been a lot of cuts to school sports recently and schools just can't afford to try new things.

"So we offer a taster day. We get to as many children as we can and then we can start after-school clubs. The demand is always there."

The charity also runs sessions in circus skills and skating.

It is currently in the process of converting an old ambulance into a "multi-sports vehicle", including a DJ desk, state-of-the-art sound system and sporting equipment.

Mr Edwards said: "It also has a projector. So children can film themselves skating, make a film in the vehicle and then project it on to a wall right there and then.

"We just want to make sure as many kids as possible are able to enjoy sport.

"For some young people, this really has changed their lives."

The charity was set up by local entrepreneur Richard Gregory, who discovered roller hockey at the age of 40, thanks to his children.

The scheme is funded through grants and with a donation from his company, Ovation Systems.

Now the charity is on the hunt for interested schools and volunteers, who could help reach out to more young people.

TIM STARKEY

LABOUR

Mr Starkey has been a barrister for 11 years and has prosecuted and defended in hundreds of trials.

His key policing priorities include putting victims first and fighting cuts to the police budget.

Mr Starkey said he wanted to stop 'police privatisation', create a more effective service and keep decision-making local.

He added: "I understand how the criminal justice system works and I want it to work better."

ANTHONY STANSFELD

CONSERVATIVE

West Berkshire councillor Mr Stansfeld, from Hungerford, sits on the Thames Valley Police Authority.

The 66-year-old served in the Army before becoming managing director at an aircraft company.

He said he would focus on reducing rural crime and improving household burglary detection rates and added: "I introduced neighbourhood policing as part of my role with the police authority. I have the experience to do the role."

JOHN HOWSON

LIBERAL DEMOCRAT

Former teacher Prof Howson has more than 20 years' experience of the criminal justice system.

He is a visiting professor at Oxford Brookes University as well as a visiting research fellow at Oxford University.

Prof Howson said he knew what it was like to be a victim of crime.

He believes stopping re-offending is the key to keeping police budgets down.

He added: "I want to ensure cases get to court as quickly as possible."

BARRY COOPER

UKIP

Mr Cooper, of Waddesdon, Buckinghamshire, works as a salesman in London.

His intended deputy is David Kennedy who worked for 32 years in the prison service, including a term as governor of Aylesbury Young Offenders' Institution.

Mr Cooper, 35, said: "I will be an advocate and voice for normal people, completely accessible and accountable.

"I will want consistent dialogue with all of those in the Thames Valley, and will work closely with Victim Support."

PATIENCE AWE

INDEPENDENT

Ms Awe, from Berkshire, has worked in teaching, banking and IT.

She has also served as a charity trustee and says she is passionate about volunteering and serving the community.

She said: "I will give victims a voice with the hope of transforming painful memories into powerful motivators and sources of strength, ensure the policing needs of the people are met and work in collaboration with Community Safety Partnerships and statutory agencies."

Mr Howard, from Buckinghamshire, has been a businessman for 27 years and a magistrate in Berkshire for 20 years.

He was a borough councillor for 13 years, during which time he was chairman of the scrutiny committee and cabinet member for resources.

He said: "This role should be apolitical. I see my main role as being the link between people in the community and their local police by concentrating on crimes that affect people locally."

Meet the candidates

Six in the race to be first Thames Valley Police commissioner

By Emma Harrison

THE race is on to become the person to lead Thames Valley Police.

Six candidates from across the region were announced on Friday and they will battle it out to be police and crime commissioner in the election on November 15.

The role – which has a salary of £85,000 – will include a number of responsibilities, including appointing and dismissing the chief constable, setting and updating a police and crime plan and setting the force budget.

It is the first time people in England and Wales will be able to directly elect someone who is responsible for how crime is tackled in their areas.

Amersham barrister Tim Starkey is the Labour candidate, West Berkshire District Council member Anthony Stansfeld is the Conservative candidate, Prof John Howson, a magistrate from Oxford, is standing for the Lib Dems, and salesman Barry Cooper for UKIP.

There are two independent candidates, Patience Awe, from Berkshire, and former Slough borough councillor Geoff Howard.

Mr Starkey, 38, from Chalfont St Giles, said: "My background is in the criminal justice system. I have worked as a barrister, as a defence lawyer, and for the prosecution – and I want to make it work better."

Mr Stansfeld, 66, from Hungerford, said: "I ran an internationally-known company and I was also in the Army. I am now a councillor and I was on the police authority. So, I think I have the experience to do it and I think I can do it well."

Prof Howson, 65, who is the managing director of an Oxford-based education research company, said: "It is a new post and it is an important post because it is the democratic face of the police and the accountable part of the police."

Mr Cooper, 35, from Waddesdon, said: "I am standing because I don't want to see the role of police and crime commissioner filled by a mouthpiece from one of the older parties.

"The role is putting somebody in there by law representing the populus view – it is a democratic view."

Mr Howard, from Bourne End in Buckinghamshire, works as a magistrate in Berkshire and also runs an estate and letting agents.

He said: "I am standing because I think I have the relevant experience to do the job well.

"I am independent – I don't think it should be political. I don't feel that whoever is elected should be consulting the party manifesto before making a decision."

Ms Awe, from Bershire, has worked in banking, teaching and IT, and wants to "ensure that the policing needs of the people are met".

The last day for residents to register to vote is 5pm on October 31.

Postal vote applications must be received before 5pm on October 31, and proxy applications before 5pm on November 7.

A total of 41 new police and crime commissioners will be elected across England and Wales and they will take office on November 22.

Candidates had the opportunity to withdraw their nomination up until noon yesterday.

The candidates had to pay a deposit of £5,000 to stand, which will only be returned to those who get more than five per cent of the vote

Andrew Grant, police area returning officer, said: "With the candidates now announced for the election on November 15, it is a good time to check you are registered to vote, so you can have your say on who will represent you.

"Registering to vote is quick, straightforward and easy and the elections team at your local authority will be happy to help."

THE ROLE

THE role of the police and crime commissioner is to:

- Hold the chief constable to account for the delivery of the force
- Set and update a police and crime plan
- Set the force budget and precept
- Regularly engage with the public and communities
- Appoint and dismiss the chief constable

THE police and crime commissioner cannot:

- Tell the professionals how to do their job – the chief constables retain direction and control of the force's officers and staff
- Dictate who is arrested and how investigations work
- Salary: £85,000
- The police and crime commssioner will be required to swear an oath of impartiality when they are elected

THE VOTING

VOTERS will indicate their first and second preferences.

If no candidate has 50 per cent of the first preference votes, the two candidates with the highest number of first preference votes proceed to a second round count and second choice votes are redistributed.

The Thames Valley Police area includes three counties – Buckinghamshire, Berkshire and Oxfordshire, covering 2,200sq miles, 16 local authorities and an electorate of 1.7 million.

Voters will be able to cast their vote in one of 1,465 polling stations.

Don't vote, says former London police chief

FORMER Metropolitan Police commissioner Sir Ian Blair has encouraged people not to vote for police and crime commissioners next month.

Sir Ian, who lives in Oxfordshire, said the police areas were too big for any individual to properly represent.

He said: "I've never said this before, but I actually hope people don't vote because that is the only way we are going to stop this."

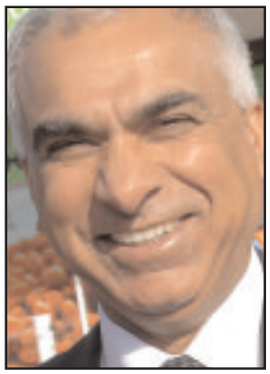

Voters across England and Wales are due to go to the polls on November 15 to elect a police and crime commissioner for each force area, including the Thames Valley.

The Government has faced criticism for holding the elections in winter and not making enough effort to publicise the elections and failing to offer candidates a free mail shot with their policies.

The new commissioners will control police budgets, set priorities and have hire and fire powers over the chief constable.

Ex-chairman decides to withdraw from ballot

Police job is 'too party-political'

Former police authority chairman Khan Juna

InBRIEF

Charity cash in the bag

SHOPPERS donated 185 bags – which will be sold in British Heart Foundation charity shops – during a series of collections at Castle Quay shopping centre, Banbury, in August. The items could raise £3,700 when resold.

By Ben Wilkinson

THE election of a new police commisioner has stumbled further into crisis after the man who had been overseeing Thames Valley Police quit the race for the £85,000-a-year job and branded the election "a party-political campaign".

Khan Juna, the former chairman of Thames Valley Police Authority, said the price and effort of campaigning meant it was impossible for an independent candidate to win.

The newly-created job will replace the authority. The winning candidate's duties will include setting the force's budget, forming policing plans and engaging with the public.

Mr Juna, who had hoped to stand as an independent, said the process was becoming too politicised.

The elected candidate would have to sign an oath of impartiality before they start the job on November 22.

He said: "Officers of the Crown are responsible to uphold the law above party politics. If there is a party influence, it will be difficult to keep confidence in this public service."

And Mr Juna said the money for the £75m elections would be better spent on front-line policing.

Mr Juna, 59, has been on the police authority since 2003 and chaired it for the last four years.

In a statement announcing his withdrawal from the race, he said: "This is a flawed policy that has been badly implemented. In these political elections I believe that the public are the real losers – uninformed about the election, ill informed about the candidates and what they stand for and with a serious risk of the politicisation of policing.

"These are elections which nobody wanted, which few people know about and which, despite the insincere rhetoric of government, have turned into yet another party-political campaign.

"November 15 will not be a good day for policing in England and Wales."

Nominations for the post closed last Friday.

Elise Benjamin was set to be the Green Party's nominee but said her party could not afford to contest the election.

She said it would cost £35,000 to send leaflets across the region, adding: "It is prohibitively expensive."

Candidates must also provide a deposit of £5,000 and 100 supporting signatures from voters.

Thames Valley Chief Constable Sara Thornton said: "Parliament has decided that's what we are going to do, so my responsibility is to make sure the transition happens as smoothly as possible and policing in the Thames Valley is improved."

Home Office spokesman Hannah McCarthy said: "Commissioners will be elected by the people and will be held accountable at the ballot box – a huge democratic step forward over current unelected police authorities."

She said the cost of the election would otherwise not have gone towards crime fighting.

The ballot will be held on November 15.

Independent candidate also steps aside

DEVELOPER Martin Young has said bureaucracy and his bid to sue police are his reasons for stepping aside as a candidate for the newly-created police and crime commissioner post.

Mr Young had announced his intention to run in July, despite having a criminal record, but pulled out of the race last week.

The property owner pleaded guilty to a public order offence in 2008 when, in a dispute over his Old High Street, Oxford, property, he told a council officer over the phone: "I am armed. Blood will be spilt."

Martin Young

He got a two-year conditional discharge and police seized his collection of more than 350 antique guns and took away his firearms licence.

Mr Young said: "I hadn't really appreciated the nature of the thing and it didn't seem to be really me.

"The bureaucracy, which seems to surround the whole organisation of the police, seems to be more process over substance.

"The other reason is I am still involved in litigation against the police, so I thought it would be inappropriate."

Two accused of metal thefts

TWO men have been charged with stealing metal from Enstone Airfield.

Andrew Routledge, 31, of The Beeches, Chipping Norton, and Arthur Stokes, 40, of Gillett Road, Banbury, face charges of stealing three pieces of railing and the attempted theft of a steel gate post between December 27 and 31.

Routledge will appear at Banbury Magistrates' Court on January 3 and Stokes on November 5.

Flu jabs for NHS staff

STAFF at Oxfordshire's hospitals are being offered flu vaccinations throughout October – as part of a major national campaign to get more NHS workers immunised.

The Occupational Health department, along with trained ward vaccinators, will be administering the flu vaccine across the county including the Horton General Hospital in Banbury.

Each year around 2,000 Britons die of flu. It is believed the programme will help lower this figure.

Former steam engine factory is 'dangerous and must be pulled down'

Under threat of demolition: the former Barrows & Stewart portable steam engine factory, in Canal Street, Banbury

Rap for canal trust over demolition bid

THE new custodians of Britain's canal heritage have been criticised over a move to demolish a Victorian factory building.

The Canal & River Trust has applied to knock down the former Burgess Building at Canal Street, Banbury.

It said the building – which once helped produce portable steam engines – is dangerous and must be flattened.

The charity took over Britain's canal network from British Waterways this year.

But it would be a "tragic indictment" of the new body if Cherwell District Council approved the demolition plan, a heritage leader has warned.

By Oliver Evans

Banbury Civic Society chairman Rob Kinchin-Smith said the building was part of the Barrows & Stewart portable steam engine factory.

He said: "As the best-preserved vestige of Banbury's once-thriving Victorian engineering industry, the site is of high local historic importance.

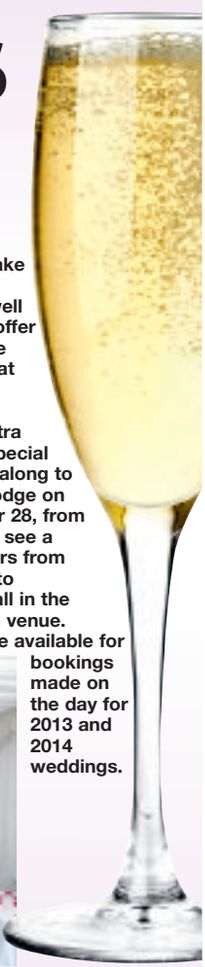

"It is disappointing that the applicant for demolition is the Canal & River Trust." The application was made just days after the council gave the canal conservation area status, giving it greater planning protection.

But the trust told the council that the vacant building was "extremely unstable" and it was "unlikely" a new tenant could be found.

It said: "Due to the dangerous state of the building and risk, demolition is required as a matter of urgency."

The trust was set up in July. Ministers said the Government would continue to fund its work but charitable status would enable it to raise cash more easily.

More pupils hit 'expected standard'

MORE of Oxfordshire's youngest children are reaching expected standards in the first years of school.

The proportion of children in the foundation stage judged to be "making a good level of development" rose from 63 per cent in 2011 to 68 per cent – above the national average and higher than the county's statistical neighbours.

Oxfordshire came third out of the 11 most similar counties.

Oxfordshire County Council education cabinet member Melinda Tilley said: "The progress at foundation stage in the last couple of years has been very encouraging and suggests a better future for achievement at all levels of education in Oxfordshire.

"We've recently seen better Key Stage 2 and Key Stage 1 results and of course the groundwork for those children is done when they are in the earliest days at school and learning the basics.

"It goes without saying that while we celebrate these results we absolutely must not become complacent.

"Continued improvement across all parts of Oxfordshire and in all age ranges is what is required."

Nationally, 64 per cent of pupils were deemed to have made a good level of development.

The improvements in Oxfordshire echoed those made nationally, where there was also a five percentage point increase in children achieving a good level of development.

Youngsters are judged across a wide range of measures, including communication, language and literacy, personal, social and emotional development.

NHS site closed as review is launched over concerns of high referral rate

Pledge to reopen maternity unit

GUARANTEES have been made that an Oxfordshire maternity unit, which was suspended over staff and patient concerns, will reopen.

The births were suspended at the Cotswold Maternity Unit, based in Chipping Norton, over concerns about the number of women who were referred on to a main hospital.

The Oxford University Hospitals NHS Trust, which runs the service, said it had taken the decision to suspend births last Thursday.

It said it took the decision after staff and patients raised concerns. It has now launched an internal review.

Jane Hervé, a newly-appointed head of midwifery at the trust, will now lead a review into all aspects of the unit's working practices. It is expected to take three months.

She said: "It is not just one issue. It is a number of things that have come to light, which we have now got to explore.

"For example, the expected transfer rate from the Cotswold unit to the consultant-led team at the JR and the Horton hospitals has been higher than other years.

By Amanda Williams

"It doesn't mean that there is a problem, but we do monitor the trends as part of good working practices.

"At the moment, the transfer rate is 45 per cent.

"For a standalone unit like the Cotswold, we would expect it to be around 25 per cent."

She added: I can absolutely guarantee the unit will reopen."

The midwife-led unit, opened by David Cameron last year, is run by midwives without all the medical facilities of a general hospital.

Because the majority of women can give birth without needing medical interventions, the unit can be a good alternative to going to a general hospital.

However, if complications arise during pregnancy, women may be advised to give birth at a hospital obstetric unit.

Between April 2009 and March 2010, 159 babies were born at the unit. The following year that number fell to 92, and during the last full year there have been 117 babies born. Since April this year, 33 babies have been born there.

The unit will remain staffed and open during the day to provide women and their families with antenatal support, breast-feeding advice and support, baby hearing tests and postnatal care.

As part of the review, the trust said Ms Hervé would engage with staff, local mothers, new parents and representatives of the Maternity Services Liaison Committee (MSLC), which is a statutory body that can recommend changes and improvements.

MSLC chairman Jennifer Lanham said: "The Cotswold has had an excellent reputation. It is one of two providers in the OUH that holds UNICEF Baby Friendly Status and has enjoyed long-term service by a dedicated staff.

"It is the aim of the MSLC to work with the local people and the OUH to see that the unit is restored to that same high standard of care."

Women from Chipping Norton and the surrounding areas will continue to have a choice of where to give birth, including the Horton Hospital, Banbury; the John Radcliffe Hospital, Oxford; home birth and the neighbouring South Warwickshire Hospitals Trust.

Praise for car-sharing scheme that has saved local commuters £7.5m

How to share the burden

PEOPLE using a car-sharing scheme in Oxfordshire have made savings totalling an estimated £7.5m since it launched two years ago, it has been claimed.

By Andrew Ffrench

There are now 7,231 members of Oxfordshire Liftshare, who save money on fuel bills and cut congestion and carbon dioxide emissions.

According to Liftshare, which runs the scheme on behalf of the county council, members have shared thousands of journeys since the scheme began, saving a total of more than 26.5 million car miles.

Among those signed up to the scheme are Tom Reed and Margaret Murphy.

Mr Reed, 22, and mum-of-three Mrs Murphy, who is in her 40s, started car sharing in August last year when they realised they worked in the same place and lived near each other.

Mr Reed, said: "It costs me about £30 a week on fuel to get to work, which adds up to about £1,560 a year.

"I drive my Ford Focus one week and Margaret uses her Nissan Primera the next, which cuts fuel costs by half and also reduces wear and tear costs on the vehicles.

"The price of fuel is ridiculous at the moment, so it makes sense to join a scheme like this if you can.

"Parking space can be limited and our company is backing the scheme by setting aside about 20 spaces for people sharing vehicles."

Mrs Murphy added: "My car is a bit of a gas guzzler – it can cost me about £40 a week on fuel to get to and from work, so this is a really good idea and helps with the family finances.

Drivers join the scheme free – by visiting the website oxfordshireliftshare.com to link up with others making the same journey.

County transport chief Rodney Rose said: "Clearly the scheme is making great savings for members, but it is not just about pounds and pence — it's also about reducing the number of cars on Oxfordshire's roads and helping the environment."

Liftshare spokesman Cecilia Bromley-Martin said: "Oxfordshire Liftshare now has a good number of people who have joined."

Councils braced for new tax changes

COUNCILS in Oxfordshire could be faced with having to make yet more savings – thanks to the latest Government changes to the council tax system.

For the last two years the Government has offered local authorities funding in exchange for freezing their council tax.

Now, councils will be given three choices – which could potentially leave them out of pocket.

They can keep council tax at its current level and accept a grant equivalent to a one per cent increase from the Government, make the maximum two per cent increase or hold a costly local vote on any rise higher than two per cent.

This year, Oxfordshire County Council received a grant of £7.5m, equivalent to a 2.5 per cent rise in council tax.

But, based on the same figures, it would only receive £3m if it took the Government's deal in 2013.

County council spokesman Paul Smith said: "The council doesn't set its budget until February, so proposals and decisions on council tax levels will be made in the new year."

The 2.5 per cent grant was given to councils which chose not to increase council tax in 2011/12 and 2012/13.

Thames Valley Police Authority spokesman Candy Stallard said:

Chancellor George Osborne

"The precept will be set by the Police and Crime Commissioner when he or she is elected in November."

Chancellor George Osborne stressed the Government was still trying to help local authorities.

In a statement he said: "The Government will set aside an extra £450m to help freeze council tax bills in England.

"The support for local authorities means that taxpayers living in an average Band D home in England could save up to £72 on a five per cent rise in council tax.

"Over the last two years the Government has provided grants of around £2bn to help freeze council tax.

"A freeze in council tax in 2013-14 would represent a real terms cut of around two per cent and a fall of nine per cent in real terms over the past three years."

Drop in jobless is greeted

A BUSINESS leader has welcomed latest figures which show the number of people signing on the dole in the county has fallen again.

Nigel Wild, president of the Oxfordshire Chamber of Commerce, said it was a sign that the Oxfordshire economy was in good health.

He added: "We do seem to be doing particularly well in the county, with fewer premises shutting and a good rate of start-up businesses – which is great to see.

"Government policy is also having an effect on the benefits culture and people are realising the gravy train is not going to go on forever."

Latest figures from the Office of National Statistics show a total of 6,700 people claimed Jobseeker's Allowance in Oxfordshire in September, a drop of 189 on the previous month.

It is the seventh consecutive monthly fall and the claimant count continues to be at its lowest rate since December 2008.

The figure fell in every district of the county with the biggest fall in Oxford where there were 150 fewer people signing on.

Kingdom come to take us all Higher

A TALENTED singer who has performed with the likes of Mariah Carey, Stevie Wonder, Leona Lewis, Enrique Iglesias and Phil Collins will lead a choir of angelic voices this Sunday.

The CK Gospel Choir, one of the UK's premier outfits, presents its unique brand of gospel, soul and jazz with a full band at The Mill, headed by the charismatic vocalist Harlarno Weekes.

Weekes is the ensemble's founder and star behind the hit soul album WhoisHarlarno.

The 16-piece group have played at numerous UK and European venues, delighting audiences with a blend of close harmony and an extraordinary ability to fuse traditional and modern gospel sounds with many genres such as soul, jazz, latin and classical.

Harlarno said: "Our performance at the Mill is part of our 2012 mini autumn tour which takes us to Bath, Hertfordshire, Berkshire, Norfolk and Oxfordshire.

"It's a chance for us to show our full range of up-tempo and slower songs. The show consists of a good mix of gospel songs, soul classics and original numbers.

"Last year we performed at the Barcelona Gospel Festival; a fantastic experience for the group and a challenge for me to see how much Spanish I could remember!

"This year we have been lucky enough to perform at Wembley Arena as part of the Olympic Games event in February.

"We entertained all 70,000 of the games-makers for the London Olympics and the atmosphere was hugely positive.

"We are all very excited about performing for the first time in Banbury, I hope the audience brings their dancing shoes."

The repertoire for CK (Children of the Kingdom) Gospel Choir includes Higher and Higher, Let It Shine, God's Not Dead, Down By the Riverside, Lovely Day and Walking on the King's Highway.

The choir also performs numbers including Bob Marley's One Love, Edwin Hawkins' Oh Happy Day and Stevie Wonder's Signed, Sealed, Delivered.

United by their love of gospel music they were fortunate to perform at the celebrity charity event for ARK which raised over £25m for children worldwide.

"Many high-profile names were there and we were lucky enough to perform as part of a mass choir just before the great Stevie Wonder played his set," said Harlarno.

"It was a great evening out for all and the CK Gospel Choir received a special mention for our professionalism and spirit."

■ Angelic Voices of CK sing gospel, jazz and soul at The Mill Theatre, Spiceball Park, Banbury, on Sunday at 7pm. Tickets £12-15. Call the box office on 01295 279002.

Big band swings into town

By popular request, Adrian Bullers makes a return visit to St Mary's Church in Horse Fair this Saturday.

The acclaimed 14-piece Sounds of Swing Orchestra is back to perform crowdpleasers from the Fabulous '40s.

Formed in 1977, this Swing Orchestra features West End professional performers recreating the wonderful sounds of Artie Shaw, Benny Goodman, Glenn Miller, Count Basie, Woody Herman, Harry James, Tommy Dorsey and many others.

The band have won rave reviews – not least because they play the music in its original arrangements, exactly as recorded in the Great Swing Era of the 30s and 40s, with outstanding instrumental and vocal performances.

In the last few years, the band has played at a variety of events, from theatre performances, in cabaret (backing Bobby Davro And Kenny Lynch in a Rat Pack Tribute show), opening nights of West End shows, (The Hot Mikado, Birdy, Always), for the London Swing Dance community. The band also got the very first G.I. Jive Ball at the 1930s Rivoli Ballroom off to a great start along with performances at the 100 club (Monday nights – Stompin, at the 100 Club) themed 40s dance nights, corporate entertainment, charity shows, wedding and open-air concerts.

Modern-day Bond back on the screen

SKYFALL (12A, 143 mins) Action/Thriller. Daniel Craig, Dame Judi Dench, Javier Bardem, Ben Whishaw, Naomie Harris, Ralph Fiennes, Berenice Marlohe, Rory Kinnear, Albert Finney, Helen McCrory. Director: Sam Mendes.

Time waits for no man, not even the suave and sharply attired 007. In the 50 years since Ian Fleming's debonair secret agent introduced himself to Sylvia Trench at a card table in Dr No, global politics have changed beyond recognition.

The Iron Curtain has fallen, the Cold War has thawed, the People's Republic of China has emerged as a superpower and terrorism has shifted into the digital realm, forcing James Bond and his colleagues at MI6 to evolve.

Actors, who have been licensed to kill during these five turbulent decades, have brought something new to the party.

Sean Connery married flirtatiousness with rugged machismo and bare-chested sex appeal, providing a template that successors have struggled to match.

George Lazenby invested his short-lived 007 with tender romance, while Roger Moore arched an eyebrow with impish glee, doling out innuendo-laden one-liners with aplomb.

Timothy Dalton added darkness and grit to his emotionally tortured agent, then Pierce Brosnan restored parity between athleticism and charm, coming closest to the glory days of the 1960s.

The latest Bond, Daniel Craig, has rugged physicality in abundance but his one-note interpretation of the spy who is shaken but never stirred remains devoid of personality.

Skyfall will do nothing to dispel those concerns but is undoubtedly the best instalment of Craig's tenure to date.

Director Sam Mendes sensibly surrounds his leading man with an ensemble of award-winning actors, who bring gravitas and humour to their iconic roles. This tour-de-force supporting cast encourages Craig to raise his game but also exposes his weaknesses as an actor, most noticeably in a pivotal scene of heartbreak, which relies on a drenching from a previous fist fight to send droplets of water down his inexpressive face, suggesting the tears of a momentarily broken man.

In the brilliantly orchestrated action sequences, Craig is in his element and Mendes opens with a breathtaking 12-minute pre-credits sequence, which draws heavily from the Bourne franchise to propel Bond and field agent Eve (Naomie Harris) through the winding streets of Istanbul.

The mission ends in apparent tragedy, heralding the sombre chords of Adele's soaring theme song that harks back to the belting ballads of Shirley Bassey.

Bravely, the 23rd Bond assignment pares back the slam-bang thrills to concentrate on characterisation and plot, putting Dench's authority figure at the centre of the betrayal.

The film dazzles during verbal jousts, whether it's M discovering Bond in the shadows of her London apartment ("You're bloody well not sleeping here!") or Silva fondling Bond's inner thighs and asking what regulation training suggests he do.

"What makes you think it's my first time?" cheekily replies 007.

Bardem is deliciously camp and menacing, recalling classic villains of yore as he berates M for her deceptions in one breath ("Mummy was very bad!") then guns down innocent bystanders without mercy.

Dench is wonderful as ever and really excels when she abandons her desk for the field of action.

Supporting actress Oscar nominations have been bestowed for far less.

Whishaw asserts himself as a gadget geek with a terrific introductory scene in an art gallery, warning Bond that "age is no guarantee of experience".

A throwaway visual gag with his coffee mug is a hoot.

Daniel Craig, playing 007 in the 23rd film of the James Bond series, Skyfall

Fiennes and Harris acquit themselves well but sultry Bond girl Marlohe is forgettable.

The closing 20 minutes are the only obvious misstep by screenwriters Neal Purvis, Robert Wade and John Logan, who telegraph their intentions early on when Severine asks Bond if he will kill Silva and 007 responds "someone usually dies".

To tie up the loose ends, the writers hurriedly introduce an additional character, Bond's old gamekeeper Kincade (Albert Finney), who exists purely to manoeuvre characters into the correct positions.

Director Mendes gets high on nostalgia to the obvious delight of Bond purists.

However, he spends slightly too long looking back and, consequently, stumbles with the lacklustre final showdown – more befitting of an episode of The A-Team than the second biggest film franchise in history.

Isaac double gives Banbury a boost

BANBURY lifted themselves out of the Premier Division relegation zone with a stunning first away win of the season for boss Edwin Stein.

Amazingly, all four of their goals at Bedworth came in the first half.

Former Oxford City striker Kynan Isaac got them off to a perfect start with two strikes in the first seven minutes.

Ben Polk added to the tally in the 20th minute after latching on to a poor clearance from former Banbury keeper Andy Kemp, the ball deflecting off defender Melvyn Gourlay.

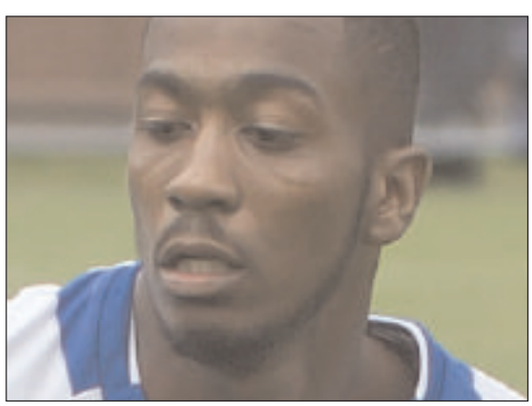

Banbury completed the scoring in the 38th minute when Harold Agyemang-Prempeh fired in a 20-yard free-kick.

Bedworth	0
Banbury United (Isaac 2, 7, Polk 20, Agyeman-Prempeh 38)	4

The visitors had Warren Plowright sent off after the break for a second yellow card.

Banbury United: Cross, Cray, Martin, Blossom, Ashton, Agyemang-Prempeh, Polk, Plowright, Lorraine, Isaac, Bridges (Talabi 90). Subs not used: Dumbleton, Ryan, Lunzitisa, Hilaire.

Attendance: 201.

Gloom as club loses its third match in a row

BANBURY Rugby Club's disappointing league season continued with a 33-10 defeat at home to Droitwich in Midlands 2 West (South) on Saturday.

The hosts led 10-5 at half-time, but faded badly and suffered their third successive defeat.

They are now third from bottom of the table, and are only ahead of the two teams above them on points difference.

There was better news of Banbury's Under 11A team, who retained their Broadstreet Festival Cup with wins against Old Coventrians by 5-0, Broadstreet Henly Road 20-0, Old Leamingtonians 20-0 and Broadstreet Bristol Street 20-0.

Banbury's try scorers across all the matches were Callum Scott (2), Ellis Dancey Brock (2), Ben Pratt (2), Connor Joubert (2), James Barker, George Eames Matthews, Tom Allen, Richard Banes and Dan Turner.

The majority of you rams are not going to be interested in what anyone else has to say today. Only your own opinion and your own views seem to matter. This could well lead to quite a few sparks flying if you meet any strong characters though, so try to keep a bit of a slow pace, if you want to keep that reputation and your heart intact. Ring me now to hear how and when foreign shores call.

TAURUS Apr 20-May 20

I've always known that you don't like to be told but you do seem to be feeling rather biased about a work matter that was not yours to decide upon in the first place. You need to make sure that you have all of the information that is required to make such a judgement or you could find yourself ruining that reputation of yours. Call now to hear how listening, not speaking is your key to success.

0906 585 4361

GEMINI May 21-Jun 20

Fun times may mean you doing something which will offend a close one. Only you can decide how far is too far to go. However there comes a time in life where you must draw a line and treat others as you would wish to be treated in return. Use this weekend to catch up on a personal project that you have been meaning to complete for months, there's a good reason why. Ring now for a full reading.

0906 585 4362

CANCER Jun 21-Jul 22

Mars is going to be pushing you to make decisions, which may not really be in your best interests. An argumentative frame of mind could see you accusing your close ones of things they have not done. Just remember to set a standard you are wiling to live by yourself. More eyes than you think are on you this week my friend. Call now to hear which sign is your key to career success.

0906 585 4363

LEO Jul 23-Aug 22

Try not to worry about looking the fool in love. Concentrate instead on taking a gamble so you may stand a chance of getting what you want out of life. It is far better to take a risk and gain or lose than to never know at all, especially for a sign such as you. The majority of Leos will take that risk, if they can find the courage to find romance this weekend. Ring now to hear where you'll find your soul mate.

0906 585 4364

VIRGO Aug 23-Sep 22

There is much work that you know you have to do but you seem to be spending all of your time thinking about it instead of actually doing it. This would all be very well if your thoughts were of a constructive nature. If you know you are going round in circles then plan something relaxing with close ones. You have had more than your fair share of stress of late. Ring now so I can help you relax.

0906 585 4365

LIBRA Sep 23-Oct 22

Time and money needs to be spent on your home and you may even find yourself putting someone up who you have not seen in some time. There is plenty of fun in store for you this week but make sure you pay off a small debt that is beginning to put a dent in that pristine reputation. You can say you don't care what other people think of you but you and I know different. Ring now to reveal all.

0906 585 4366

SCORPIO Oct 23-Nov 21

Use the ability that you have to focus on things so well and try to practice what you all too often preach. Love links to familiar places for both single and married Scorpios, but if you are attached then don't play with fire; your actions are far more obvious than you think, to all around. Dealing with children can change your choices regarding Christmas. Ring me now to face your emotions.

0906 585 4367

SAGITTARIUS Nov 22-Dec 21

I know you think that the efforts you have made in your work over the last few days have gone unnoticed but you would be wrong. You are about to find out just how highly certain figures in your life really think of you. Take the praise nicely though or they will think you are arrogant, which of course you and I both know not to be true, don't we Sagittarius? Phone now to excel in business.

0906 585 4368

CAPRICORN Dec 22-Jan 19

Your family means more to you now than ever before and you seem to both love and hate this feeling all at the same time. Don't argue with close ones but get on with enjoying what is before you all instead. A money worry that you thought you would have to get help on turns out to be nothing more than a storm in a teacup. Ring me now to right that wrong in love.

0906 585 4369

AQUARIUS Jan 20-Feb 18

Please try to take a little of the advice that you love to give out to everyone else but which you fail to take yourself. Taureans are going to be trying to tell you some very tall stories so get the facts and figures if your dealings with them involve money. You must try to use this weekend to de-stress and to get out a bit more. Give me a ring for some amazing news on your love life.

0906 585 4370

PISCES Feb 19-Mar 20

It is just silly to keep accepting things when you have not completed what is already before you. There is too much at stake over the coming month to put your reputation at risk in this way. Emotions are running deep in love and it is time to lay your cards on the table and to tell a close one just what you really want from them. Phone to hear why delaying work is not an option now.

The Day You Went Away

Today brings tears and memories of sorrow and regret
a day filled with such sadness
it's not easy to forget.
For everyone whose lives you touched has always loved you so
and it was so hard to accept that you'd ever have to go.
And this message is for you especially to say this world is lost someone wonderful
the day you went away.

SELECTION MATTERS
"practical and personal recruitment solutions"

Recruitment Matters by Duncan Cooper, Director of Selection Matters Ltd

Further to the recent announcement that Banbury's unemployment figures are down for the first time since the credit crunch first took hold in late 2007 we are beginning to see more and more employers regain the confidence to recruit. It has been the case in recent months and years that many vacancies, be that administrative and clerical or higher end managerial roles, have gone unadvertised and unfilled when in a more positive economy these same positions would have been refilled immediately. Hence this positive change is welcome news to folks that have been victim of mass redundancies, for example the hundreds of Vodafone employees who sadly lost their jobs last year. As a recruitment professional I worried for many of the jobseekers who fell afoul of the corporate guillotine, especially when many have the same skill set. It has been a fact that many very employable people have not been able to secure work due to the unprecedented level of competition in the Banbury area of late. Therefore, the recent positivity surrounding these latest set of unemployment figures is a breath of fresh air for many and maybe the shot in the arm Banbury's job market needed.

On the flip side we are still seeing many professionals from production and manufacturing backgrounds finding it hard to find work and indeed a rate of pay to match previous employment. Simply put, the closures of the likes of Alcan and Hella are still being felt by many. It is true to say that the more new businesses that arrive or develop in Banbury that "making things", the better. A short flourish of manufacturing roles is a welcome sight, CTG is one such business on the cusp of creating job opportunities for Banbury's production and manufacturing labour force. Let's hope this trend continues.

Ever wanted to achieve the perfect body but without the surgery? Gymophobics™ THE 30 MINUTE WORKOUT has the solution.

What is Non-Surgical Liposuction?
Non-Surgical Liposuction is a non-invasive (surgery free) body shaping technique that reduces volume by eliminating cellulite and localised fat deposits in the abdomen, hips, flanks, arms, inner thighs and knees.

Does Non-Surgical Liposuction reduce weight and volume?
It eliminates clusters of fat, which have weight, consequently your body loses volume.

After how many sessions will I begin to see results?
You should notice results after 3-5 sessions, however results may vary depending on the individual.

Is it painful?
This treatment will never cause pain.

Does cellulite reappear after using Non-Surgical Liposuction?
Although Non-Surgical Liposuction ensures effective and long-lasting results, we can not guarantee against cellulite reappearing. To prevent the reappearance cellulite we recommend a balanced diet, regular physical exercise and maintenance sessions using Non-Surgical Liposuction.

Are there any side effects?
If you are healthy, Non-Surgical Liposuction has no reported side effects, nevertheless in some people it may produce a reddening of the skin that can last for about 2 hours.

Which sport activity can supplement Non-Surgical Liposuction?
The vibration plate is the ideal component due to it's toning and draining qualities. You will receive these FREE with every treatment.

Is it necessary to combine with exercise?
No not necessarily but 30 minutes of activity will enhance the results as it helps to drain fluids.

How much water should I drink?
It is essential to begin hydrating yourself two hours before applying Non-Surgical Liposuction. It is also advisable to drink more water after finishing a session. The recommended quantity is at least 2 liters during these periods, as it helps to eliminate toxins

Is it affective on 'Orange Peel' syndrome?
Yes it is affective because it destroys adipose cells that cause fat storage.

Do you have to be a Gymophobics member to receive this treatment?
NO, our Beauty Suite is open to the general public.

How long should I wait between sessions?
It is advisable to wait 72 hours between sessions.
